Brief Game Overview:

Representatives from 2 packs of the city turned up at the arranged meeting place which was the burial ground for the City Patrol pack. On arrival they found Bearclaw mysteriously dead with no apparent wounds on him. After a little investigation Catriona discovered that there had been a battle between 4 members of the City Patrol and approximately 15 spirits. On moving the body Gashes appeared across Bearclaws chest and further investigation meant that the packs present realised he had sacrificed himself for the rest of his pack. A hole was dug and Bearclaw was buried with the proper rites, ancestor spirits of the City patrol rose to watch the ceremony. After the ceremony Eric took the fetish from around Bearclaws neck with the intention of passing it back to the city patrol when they had been found. Eric expressed a desire to search Chopwell woods after hearing of the large spider web that had been discovered and mentioned on the news. However Catriona and Miakoda pushed for the packs to go in search of the remaining City Patrol before it was too late. Heading towards the Locus under Catriona's control to avoid dangerous spirits, they headed back through the Hisil to the cooling tower to try and pick up the scent of the missing Pack.

Upon getting back to the Cooling Tower they met a group of Mercenary Spirits, The 33rd Assault, they made an agreement firstly for a Scout for an hour to track down the City Patrol, Eric paid significant essence for this,. While waiting for the scout to return Private Mirax Argentyne showed the group a map that she had found. After discussing the map briefly and having been given the information of where it was a map was purchased from the mercenaries for significant Essence. The scout returned shortly after that and gave them a brief list of where to find the remaining 3. Tyrell they were told was dead not to far from the cooling tower, April was in the Hisil communing with an inspiration spirit and the other member was no-where to be found. At this time Catriona decided to try and split the resources so that everything could get done. Miakoda was to go and bury Tyrell with his pack mates. Eric and Mr Anderson were to go retrieve April and keep her safe. Meanwhile Catriona and Mirax were to go to the Army Silo on the map and see what was around. Eric arranged for a transporter to take Mirax and Catriona to the army silo for stupid amounts of essence to be paid over the next month.

Miakoda managed to get Tyrell's body back to the Cooling tower where she again performed the funeral rites attended again by the ancestor spirits of the City Patrol. The Ancestor spirits stayed and talked at length with Miakoda giving her presents that she has yet to realise what they do.

Eric and Mr Anderson went to the location given by the scout to find April where they found her conversing with a spirit that was claiming to be responsible for the greatest movies of all time. They managed to get her to go with them and risked going to a closer locus to leave the Hisil after it turned out April had been spending too much time in the Hisil than was sensible. April was not making much sense and so for the most part they ignored what she said. Alice mentioned that Selwyn had been captured. They then went to track down Miakoda back at the cooling tower.

Mirax and Catriona meanwhile went to Berwick upon tweed to the army silo. On arriving there they paid yet more essence to the helicopter to allow it to manifest the other side of the gauntlet. Arriving in the real world once more Mirax used her abilities to sneak into the silo, while Catriona used her Fetish to walk in through the gate. They discovered a Victorian Parlour Library which contained vast amounts of Information On Werewolves, including, weaknesses and physiologies etc. One of the books had a chapter on Mirax. As they had gone in search of Mirax's File they tried their luck at the computer, Mirax succeeded in locking it. They went to look through the other door and found a red flashing light. They decided to leave it alone for now. Trying to take books with them they found that the books were bound to the library and so slipping through the gauntlet again in the helicopter they went back into the silo. While Mirax continued to read up on her books

Catriona again became invisible and went to look through the door with the Flashing Light. In there she met something that could see her and told her it was not time for mirax to know what was further in. It then destroyed the floor slowly under her feet and brought down a large stone wall that they could not get past. Catriona and Mirax then left in the helicopter and went back to the cooling tower where they met up with the others and told them of the discoveries they had made. The mercenary spirit decided to go speak to the Major who owned the library to see if he wanted to hire them to protect it.

Eric wanted to introduce the rest of his pack to the spirit that he was talking to about becoming the pack totem and they hoped it may be able to help destroy the information held within the library as well. As everyone else was going to the museum, Catriona went along anyway, even though it wasn't her packs business. On entry into the locus at the museum each person was asked what tribute they brought. As each person said what they brought a swirling shadow seemed to engulf them and they passed back into a room that exists only in the hisil where they met with a T-rex spirit named Hunter of Aeons that now hunts information. Each person passed on their tribute Mr Anderson passed on his security codes for the Northern regional database for the national trust and after a while of discussions Catriona Left to pursue her own line of thought as regards the library problem. Another of Mirax's letters appeared yet before they could get hold of it Hunter ate it. He also showed them a projection of 2 men in black suits that he said Mirax had been thinking about. Eric mentioned that he had seen these men near Catriona's car that Mirax had borrowed earlier that evening while running errands. They tried to figure out what was keeping Hunter held within the room and after a while and some unsuccessful attempts Eric stopped to ask the spider that spins its webs over the locus if it knew. When it said that it was keeping Hunter eric tried to hit it. He failed and ended up passed out on the floor. Mr Anderson also had an attempt at this and met with the same fate, shortly after that Mirax tried too and the only member of the pack left standing was Miakoda. The Spider handed them some of their essence back and they negotiated to "borrow" Hunter in Exchange for leaving Mirax behind for the spider to fight instead. Mirax was unaware of this deal. Catriona who had returned in time to step over Mr Anderson and Eric decided to return to the library to see if she could help. As they reached halfway towards the library they met up again with the mercenary spirit. Catriona left the other pack to make whatever deals they wished and went to keep mirax company. Eric made a deal with the mercenary for help in the war and for them to leave and allow them to pass to get to the silo. When they got there things seemed to not be as easy as they had imagined and Hunter was less help than they'd originally thought. As yet there is still no closure on what is happening with the library....
