Brief Game Overview:

The group met initially at the burial ground as per usual, before retiring to the beach at Blyth, to debate on the events of last month. Mirax, noting Scott's absence from the pack, took the temporary position of Alpha of the Fangs of Ghealai. New Werewolves arrive

Whilst making sandcastles, several noticed that Miakoda was making a replica of the silo in Berwick. Examination of this turned up a miniature Kara. Who was placed in a tobacco tin. After a while a small knocking could be heard from inside the tin. When opened a miniature of the Major appeared in the form that he'd been seen before, with wires. These then attached themselves to the nearest people. The tin was closed, cutting the wires, the remaining parts dissolving into thin air. The tin was then sealed with string and Demelsa put it in her bag for safe keeping.

Whilst others deliberated on this, Mirax and Catriona secretly took off to Berwick on a reconnaissance mission, informing the others on their arrival. Demelsa followed immediately as her alpha was ignoring the fact that she was supposed to be being protected. The rest followed ignoring being told that they were to wait for a request for help.

The trio were ushered into the base after their attempts at stealth failed, and ended up in the library with a man named Craig. Fearing that he may be another of the Major's pet projects, the group took Craig and headed deeper into the silo, to find themselves in a sewage plant (the bowels) All at some point passed out, and the others arrived to find the four in varying states.

An escape plan was launched, with the group heading back to Blyth beach, several noticing that they had items of Versace clothing in their vehicles-a sign of the Men in Black following them? These black cars had been spotted since November, and so were starting to worry, particularly since the group found themselves at one point wearing such clothing-unbeknownst to them.

Lt Cmdr Mark Carson was heavily injured, and the group retired to Cat's home to try to enlist help in healing him. Yet despite efforts, he died. This greatly affected Cat and Miakoda, who had tried and failed to help a man who had ultimately died for the group.

It was during the battle to save Mark's life that the group found out that the Major spirits ban was possibly that he was not allowed to kill a member of any military force. For this reason, at Mark's death, Eric decided to go after the Major - whilst Miakoda was trying to organize a funeral for the fallen wolf.

Whilst Eric and others went off to Berwick, the funeral took place, and the people who had remained both grieved for him, and seethed at the disrespect that had taken place.

Cat later took Mirax aside and explained what had happened, as Mirax had been away from them during their attempt to save Mark, and confessed her guilt and grief over the loss. Mirax, pledging her support for the Alpha, ordered her Pack to stick behind the leader of the City. She and Miakoda later confronted Anderson in a private meeting, and a plot formed to deal with both renegades and enemies of the City...
